We are Your Planner, Your Coordinator, and The Master of Ceremony

Choosing a Disc Jockey

●The music and entertainment you choose for your wedding day becomes the single most important decision you will be making in regards to the success of your Wedding Reception.

●The Disc Jockey not only being the “MC” of the event occupies the final hours of the wedding day. That is the part of the day that the lasting memories are formed. If the last hours were fun and festive, that’s what your guests go home remembering the most. Everything your guests remember about the wedding day prior to those few hours are effected by the success of the party in the end. This is a responsibility that a younger, less experience DJ would not fully understand. The seasoned professionals not only understand this, but take it very seriously as a part of their function.

●Having a DJ that reflects your taste can also help in achieving the mood and feel that you and your fiancé have envisioned. The DJ / Entertainer will also help in the overall planning and coordination of the reception.

●The Disc Jockey should be a referred company from the venue you are using. This is a quick way of identifying the more notable companies. The venue staff know that whom ever you choose will reflect the entire experience and memory of the day. They will usually be helpful in their suggestions.

●The more notable companies and DJs are booked many months before the actual date. “One year” has become a target for most planners in regards to many services including the entertainment. The sooner you can book...the better. The popular companies are booked very quickly and farther out from the date of the wedding.

●Owner operated companies are always the best choice due to the fact that they put their reputation on the line and always have a more vested interest in your wedding. A company with a “staff” of DJs can be chancey. Someone may work for a company today then...quits tomorrow.

●The equipment the DJ uses should be of professional status not “home stereo” grade. They should have professional back-up equipment as well. A computerized company is the best for organization.

●The DJ’s role at weddings have changed dramatically in the past few years. Try to seek out an experienced professional that provides full service packages. Being the host of the event, or the “Master Of Ceremony” requires the DJ to handle some of the important coordinating, timing and pacing of the wedding. Make sure that the disc jockey’s communication skills and abilities are up to performing at such an important level.

●Remember that the “best price” type shopping can be very risky for obvious reasons. The more experienced DJs will cost a bit more, but in the end the extra dollars spent for your entertainment can be a critical difference in the overall success of your event. Having the right Disc Jockey is like having an insurance policy for the success and the life-long memories of your wedding day.
